

Fugro: natural resources... expertly deployed

Fugro is an international earth science consultancy with businesses all around the world working in the energy, construction and minerals sectors. The vast majority of Fugro's people are deployed in any one of its 200 plus operating companies, conducting surveys out in the field, frequently offshore or remotely.

To ensure that the experts the business deploys in the field today get the learning and support they need to remain "world class" tomorrow, Fugro has incorporated Mohive's e-Learning Publishing System

“With options to deliver content via CD or DVD, we're able to offer training opportunities to people operating from the most remote areas in the planet.”

Andrew McNeill,
Global Learning & Development Manager, Fugro

(eLPS) into the operation's training mix. By offering training and support online, the company is overcoming many of the traditional problems associated with classroom learning. The workforce can access training modules when and where it suits them. Mohive eLPS being web based and collaborative, Fugro's people throughout the world can work together on the development of e-learning projects. ■
